

SIGNS IT'S TIME TO REPLACE YOUR REFRIGERATOR

1. Leaks or Condensation

Spotting water on the floor or condensation on the doors could be a sign that you need a new refrigerator. Condensation inside and outside of the refrigerator shows that warm air is getting in, and cold air is getting out somehow.

2. Frost Buildup

Your refrigerator being too cold can also be a sign that a replacement is needed. Ice on the inside or outside of the unit means the refrigerator is not defrosting as it should.

3. Food Spoilage

If food inside of the refrigerator often spoils and smells before the expiration date, there is probably an issue that needs to be addressed. The machine is not cooling properly which can lead to costly food waste.

4. Unusual Noises

The refrigerator is not the quietest machine in the kitchen but sounds that are different from the usual hum may mean there is a serious problem. Unplug and replug the machine to see if it continues.

5. Age of Machine

Older machines can have more break downs and cost you more money than replacing it. Old refrigerators also consume more energy than the newer models, so upgrading can save you money with its efficiency.
